How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salution, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia Torpid Liver, Constipation etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

MRS. J. BROWN POTTER.

Much interest has been taken in the first professional appearance on the stage of Mrs. J. Brown Potter, which occurred at the Haymarket Theater, in London, on March 29. The great curiosity manifested concerning the result of the adventure has been more marked because of the widely known fact of her high social position in America, being one of the leaders of society both in Washington and New York. The play was dramatized from one of Wilkie Collins' stories, in which the part of Anna Sylvester, a poor and persecuted governess, was impersonated by Mrs. Potter. She went through the part without any embarrassment from the first, but was neither a brilliant success nor a failure, although the sternest of the critics of the London Press admitted there was the stuff in her of which the best actresses are made. The first notable incident that brought Mrs. J. Brown Potter before public notice was the reading of Geo. R. Sims poem, (as given below) of "Ostler Joe," at a private entertainment given at the house of Secretary Whitney. The poem undoubtedly teaches a great moral lesson. It caused at the time quite a sensation in society generally, and was commented upon by the press from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The Great Haddock Mystery Being Cleared Up.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, MARCH 31.—The Haddock trial yesterday was of unusual interest and the court room was crowded. Mrs. Haddock, the widow of the murdered clergyman, was present and visibly effected several times. The witness, Albert Kositze, better known as "Bismarc," the eye-witness to the tragedy, testified to Freiber having induced him to tell Gransla that if he would whip the "Priester" and give him a couple of black eyes, he would receive $500, but that he finally refused to whip Haddock. He corroberated Leavitt and described the conspiracy. He said that Arensdorf met Haddock and after passing him turned and fired. He also said Arensdorf has given him $12 through Freiber to leave the country.

He also said that he had been driven to Salix, where Fritz Folger gave him more money. He then went to San Francisco. When he came back to Omaha he was shown a picture of Leavitt and assured by the Mayor that it was believed he was the man who did the shooting.

He said it was not, and told them it was John Arensdorf. His testimony was clear, strong, exact and graphic, and the most rigid cross examination failed to shake him.

During his testimony in the afternoon Mrs. Haddock fainted, and she was carried from the Court room, but recovered shortly and returned.

"DONT YOU WORRY."

How Shrewd Business Men Have Solved a Great Problem.

"Is there a fatality among our prominent men" is a question that we often ask. It is a question that perplexes our leading medical men, and they are at a loss to know how to answer it.

We sometimes think that if the physicians would give part of the energy to the consideration of this question that they give to combating other schools of practice, it might be satisfactorily answered.

The fights of "isms" reminds us often of the quarrels of old Indian tribes, that were only happy when they were annihilating each other.

If Allopathy makes a discovery that promises good to the race, Homœopathy derides it and breaks down its influence. If Homœopathy makes a discovery that promises to be a boon to the race, Allopathy attacks it.

It is absurd that these schools should fancy that all of good is in their methods and none in any other.

Fortunately for the people, the merit which these "isms" will not recognize, is recognized by the public, and this public recognition, taking the form of a demand upon the medical profession eventually compels it to recognize it.

Is it possible that the question has been answered by shrewd business men? A prominent man once said to an inquirer, who asked him how he got rich, "I got rich because I did things while other people were thinking about doing them." It seems to us that the public have recognized what this fatality is, and how it can be met, while the medical profession have been wrangling about it.

By a careful examination of insurance reports, we find that there has been a sharp reform with reference to examinations (and that no man can now get any amount of insurance who has the least developement of kidney disorder), because they find that sixty out of every hundred in this country do, either directly ot indirectly, suffer from kidney disease. Hence, no reliable company will insure a man except after a rigid urinary examination.

This reminds us of a little instance which occurred a short time ago. A fellow editor was an applicant for a respectable amount of insurance. He was rejected on examination, because, unknown to himself, his kidneys were diseased. The shrewd agent, however, did not give up the case. He had an eye to business and to his commission, and said: "Don't you worry; you get a half dozen bottles of Warner's safe cure—all dealers keep it—take it according to directions, and in about a month come around, and we will have another examination. I know you will find yourself all right and will get your policy.

The editor expressed surprise at the agent's faith, but the latter replied: "This point is a valuable one. Very many insurance agents all over the country, when they find a customer rejected for this cause, give similar advice, and eventually he gets the insurance."

What are we to infer from such circumstances? Have shrewd insurance men, as well as other shrewd business men, found the secret answer to the inquiry? Is it possible that our columns have been proclaiming, in the form of advertisements, what has proved a blessing in disguise to millions, and yet by many ignored as an advertisement?

In our files we find thousands of strong testimonials for Warner's safe cure, no two alike which could not exist except upon a basis of truth; indeed, they are published under a guarantee of $5,000 to any one who will disprove their correctness, and this offer has been standing, we are told, for more than four years.

Undoubtedly this article, which is simply dealing out justice, will be considered as an advertisement and be rejected by many as such.

We have not space nor time to discuss the proposition that a poor thing could not succeed to the extent that this great remedy has succeeded, could not become so popular without merit even if pushed by a Vanderbilt or an Astor.

Hence we take the liberty of telling our friends that it is a duty that they owe to themselves to investigate the matter and reflect carefully, for the statements published are subject to the refutation of the entire world. None have refuted them; on the contrary, hundreds of thousands have believed and proved them true, and in believing have found the highest measure of satisfaction, that which money cannot buy, and money cannot take away.

Oil and Gas Half a Century Ago.

At the present time the country is greatly excited over gas projects, and this variety of fuel is giving some towns an immense advantage over others as manufacturing centers, and economy in living.

Gas is nothing new under the sun, and it has been annoying people for many years, but the attempt to utilize it does not date back many years. The truth about the matter is that formerly men did not know enough to utilize it when they found it.

About the year 1806, two brothers in Virginia supposed that they could find salt water by drilling into the rock. They went to work and after two years of faithful work they struck a vein of good brine. At that period salt was looked upon as a great necessity, and was hard to get. It was carried many miles on pack mules, and when it reached the consumer in "the West," Ohio and western Pennsylvania and Virginia, it was very expensive, in those days when a quarter of a dollar was twenty-five cents exactly.

The success of the brothers in seeking a salt vein led others to attempt it, and the result was that often the wells were spoiled by striking oil and gas, which either tainted the salt water discovered or flowed down the machinery used in drilling.

So much oil used to run out of the hills along the Ohio river that it took the name of "Old Greasy."

We remember well of reading in our boyhood days of gas finds, of derricks being destroyed by a rush when pockets were punctured in the operation of drilling, and other evidences shows plainly that Old Earth is full of it, but people did not take the hint until quite recently.

Some years ago a man of coarse language started to dig for salt water in Pennsylvania, and after he was down a considerable depth, his friends asked him what he proposed to accomplish in digging so deeply. He replied that he was going to have salt or dig through to hell. He struck natural gas, and by an accident it was set on fire and he barely escaped being burned to death. The verdict rendered was that he did what he said he would.

There is, it is reported, a man residing near Findlay, Ohio, who dug a well, in 1863 and instead of water he got gas, and he had the shrudeness to slip an old boiler or pipe in the well and from this he obtained fuel for twenty years past.

There are many natural resources that are yet hidden from men, and they may be before our eyes and we are not able to see them. Men should have caught on the natural gas advantages about a century ago, and by this time the country would have been supplied with fuel from the immense gas generator concealed in the bosom of the earth.

Diphtheria.

"I am living in a neighborhood surrounded with Diphtheria and was attacked with Ulcerated Sore Throat. I at once commenced to use Darbys Prophylactic Flued, diluted about one half, as a gargle, when great clots of hard membrane and mucous came from my throat, and the attack passed off. I am satisfied of its efficacy as a preventive and cure for Diphtheria."—W. P. Woodward, Frankford, Pa.
